

Market demand (derivation)

A market consists of 2 consumers, A and B. The market demand is derived from the individual demand curves by adding them horizontally.

Similarly, the market supply can be derived.