

Market Demand (derivation)

A market consists of 2 consumers, A and B (and of many sellers). The market demand is derived from the individual demand curves by adding them horizontally.

Similarly, market supply can be derived.